Devil's Sinkhole

STATE NATURAL AREA

Devil's Sinkhole State Natural Area lies hidden away in the western edge of the Texas Hill Country. This 1,861-acre Natural Area is home to the Devil's Sinkhole, a National Natural Landmark. It is the largest single-chamber cave in the state and, at over 350 feet, the fourth deepest. The sinkhole is home to over three million bats that migrate to Texas every summer, as the sun sets visitors can watch as the millions of bats pour out like a tornado.

Access to Devil's Sinkhole State Natural Area is limited to guided tours only. Visitors are escorted to the site for evening bat programs, guided nature hikes, birding programs, and much more. There is currently no camping or day use available. Reservations are required and can be made by contacting the Devil's Sinkhole Society, or visiting our visitor's center located in the town square of Rocksprings, Texas. Day tours and special group tours can also be arranged with prior notice.
