INFORMATION GUIDE TO PALO DURO CANYON STATE PARK

Life's better outside.®

Welcome to the “Grand Canyon of Texas.” Palo Duro Canyon State Park is a myriad of recreational opportunities, rich history and colorful geology. Visitors from all over the world have visited Texas’ second-largest park, which officially opened on July 4, 1934.

Palo Duro Canyon is 120 miles long and 800 feet deep, and it is the second-largest canyon in the United States. The canyon began forming less than 1 million years ago when the Prairie Dog Town Fork of the Red River first carved its way through the Southern High Plains. The rocks expose a geologic story which began approximately 250 million years ago. Some of the oldest rock layers in the canyon belong to the Quartermaster Formation. These rocks, which are located at the bottom of the canyon, are noted for their bright red claystone and white gypsum. Next, the Tecovas Formation can be seen with its yellow, gray and lavender mudstone. The sandstone and coarse gravel of the Trujillo Formation can be seen as you further ascend the canyon. The next layer of rocks are from the Ogalala Formation with sand, silt, clay and caliche.

HISTORY

Prehistoric Native Americans made use of the canyon for at least 12,000 years. Historic tribes in the area included Kiowa, Comanche, Apache and Cheyenne. In 1874, during the Red River Wars, Col. R.S. Mackenzie was sent into the area to move the Native Americans to Oklahoma. Col. Mackenzie and the 4th Cavalry were able to capture over 1,400 horses belonging to the tribes. Cut off from their transportation, the tribes later surrendered. In 1876, Charles Goodnight entered the canyon and opened the JA Ranch, which supported over 100,000 cattle.

PLANTS

Palo Duro is Spanish for “hard wood,” in reference to the Rocky Mountain juniper trees found in the canyon. Other common tree species seen in the canyon include mesquite, cottonwood, willow, western soap-berry and hackberry. Wildflower and grass species also dot the canyon walls and floor. Most commonly seen are Indian blanket, star thistle, sunflower, paperflower, blackfoot daisy, tansy aster, sideoats grama, buffalograss, sage brush, yucca and prickly pear cactus.

WILDLIFE

Palo Duro Canyon has a wide variety of wildlife. Park visitors may encounter mule deer, roadrunners, wild turkey and cottontails. Other wildlife in the park includes coyotes, barbary sheep, bobcats and western diamondback rattlesnakes. Bird-watching is a popular activity in the park. Painted buntings, canyon wrens and red-tailed hawks are a few of the many interesting birds living in the canyon.

» DO NOT FEED THE ANIMALS.

PARK SAFETY

Flash Flooding: During rains, Palo Duro Canyon can flood over a short period of time. Please observe the following:

- Monitor the depth gauges at the water crossings. If the water exceeds six inches, DO NOT CROSS.
- Never try to cross flooded areas.
- Always monitor the local weather stations and heed staff warnings.
- Use common sense and never put yourself, family or friends in jeopardy.

Fires: Fires are permitted only in established fire rings and grills except during fire bans. Only gas fires are allowed during fire bans.

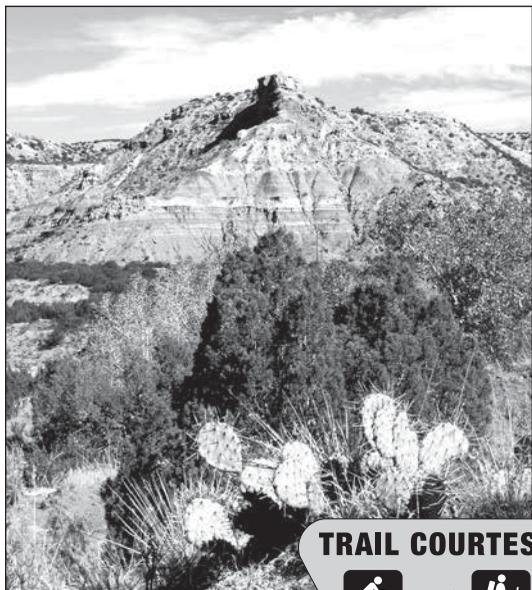

» DO NOT COLLECT FIREWOOD.

Rough Terrain: Most of the park is open for your enjoyment. However, please be careful of rough terrain, loose rocks and steep slopes. Be advised that you proceed at your own risk.

Heat: Summers may be extreme, and heat-related injuries are possible.

» DRINK PLENTY OF WATER. USE CAUTION.

Park Regulations: Illegal drugs and public display or consumption of alcoholic beverages are not allowed in the park. The collection of rocks, animals, plants and artifacts is strictly prohibited. Failure to abide by these and other park regulations may result in a fine, expulsion or arrest.

TRAILS

Trail Etiquette:

- Equestrians should only use trails designated for their use.
- Use caution and a slow speed when coming to a blind spot. Announce your presence.
- Remain on established trails.
- Carry out everything that you carry in.
- Do not collect rocks, animals, plants or artifacts.
- Respect trails through wise use and common courtesy.

Givens, Spicer & Lowry Running Trail:

This trail is three miles from start (across from Hackberry Campground) to the intersection of the Lighthouse Trail (plus 1.5 miles to the Lighthouse). The Little Fox Canyon Trail is a two-mile loop off of the main trail. This trail is moderately difficult with steep climbs and a total round trip distance of 11 miles. Horses are prohibited.

Paseo Del Rio Trail: This trail is accessible at the Chinaberry Day Use Area, and it traces the Prairie Dog Town Fork of the Red River. It is a two-mile round trip hike with shade and an even path. This trail is considered easy and suitable for all levels. Horses are prohibited.

Equestrian Trail: This trail starts at the turn-around area at the south end of the park. The trail heads south across the creek, then loops back west for a distance of four miles.
