STATE PARK

Tall loblolly pines and red oaks shade Lake Livingston State Park, a popular haven for camping and fishing in East Texas. Boat ramps and fishing piers provide easy access to the lake, which supports crappie, largemouth bass, white bass, striped bass, and flathead, channel, and blue catfish. The park also has swimming areas and an observation tower. Hiking trails wind through scenic backcountry and developed areas of the park. A one-mile raised boardwalk provides access for the mobility impaired to reach bird and wildlife viewing areas.
