December 2017

Colonel's Chat (Q&A with TPWD Law Enforcement Division Director, Colonel Grahame Jones)

As the new Colonel for Texas Game Wardens with 25 years of experience, you have seen many organizational and technological in changes your career. What would you recommend to an individual who has an interest in pursuing a career as a Texas Game Warden? My advice to an aspiring Texas Game Warden would be to focus on receiving the best education possible. It's also important to give back, so consider volunteering in your local community or taking a more active role with conservation organizations such as the Texas Wildlife Association, Coastal Conservation Association, or other similar groups. Get to know your local Game Wardens and let them know you are interested. You mentioned changes and advancements in the last quarter century. An example of two very important aspect of being a Texas Game Warden are adaptability and flexibility. Change is inevitable and being prepared for the challenges brought on by change will increase the overall success of any organization. With that being said, I still believe we have the best law enforcement job available today. I'm proud that Texas Game Wardens still set their own schedules. As a Texas Game Warden, it is an honor to protect both our natural resources and our fellow citizens, and we take that responsibility very seriously. Colonel Jones
